Hi there,

Earlier today, I received an email from "vote.com.au" trying to get me to vote against some upcoming changes that the auDA is proposing.

While the vote page says that people can lodge a vote 'for or against', the page only gives the option of siding with their option – which I don't.

As a web developer of over 10 years, I am frequently running into issues where clients would love to register a suitable domain name for their business – but they can't, because some random domain squatter grabbed it and is either not using it or trying to auction it off at some absurd profit.

From what I understand of the auDA's proposed changes, they are directly aimed at trying to combat domain squatting and domain reselling… and I whole-heartedly agree with the auDA's goal of doing so.

Please help keep the .au domain space clean of these horrible domainers and domain squatters.

Also… on a totally unrelated point, but hurry up and release the ".au" domain option too. I want "theProduct.au", haha :-P

Many thanks!

Regards,
Adam Ithiel
