Hi,

I am writing to respond to the consultation call regarding auDA's Purpose statement.

First thoughts: The original statement was cumbersome and lengthy. Please note that the consultation request also contains numerous grammatical errors and simple typos.

The new statement is much more concise, however it is not memorable and I think it misses a core area of security. While the statement refers to "Open with trust and confidence, I think that "Connecting Australians to an open, secure internet with trust and confidence," captures the core of the original statement and retains the focus that is challenging Australians today. I believe that auDA's core business is about balancing free and secure.
